

THE MORAL COSTS OF WAR: SHAME, GUILT, AND SELF-EMPATHY

NANCY SHERMAN

Georgetown University Professor of Philosophy

Author of The Untold War: Inside the Hearts, Minds, and Souls of our Soldiers

Wednesday, February 15 at 7 p.m.

SIU Student Center, Ballroom D

Free and open to the public.

Nancy Sherman's The Untold War: Inside the Hearts, Minds and Souls of our Soldiers (2010) was selected an "Editor's Choice" by the New York Times and the Book Pick of the Week by TIME magazine. Sherman, a distinguished professor at Georgetown University who previously taught at the U.S. Naval Academy and Yale University, is a nationally recognized expert in the general area of ethics, history of moral philosophy, ancient philosophy, military ethics, moral psychology, trauma and resilience, and the emotions.

Hosted by the Humanities Forum with support from the National Endowment for the Humanities, Illinois General Assembly, Illinois Humanities Council, Graduate and Professional Student Council, Paul Simon Public Policy Institute, Undergraduate Student Government, Office of the Vice Chancellor for Research, College of Liberal Arts Dean's Office, Departments of English and Philosophy, University Honors Program, Veterans Center, Carbondale Public Library, Eta Sigma Phi Classics Company, and Philosophy Club.

SIU Southern Illinois
University
CARBONDALE