CONFESSIONS OF AN ENVIRONMENTAL WARRIOR

What I learned from the Civil Action odyssey on behalf of the Woburn Families

Mr. Schlichtmann is renowned for his pioneering work in the Woburn water contamination case that for the first time brought together leading experts in science, medicine, and engineering and used a novel multi-disciplinary approach to unravel the complex interaction between industrial activities and public health. His groundbreaking work has been the subject of several legal and scientific journals and books, national and international television and radio shows, press reports, and magazine stories including "60 Minutes" and "Nova". The Woburn odyssey was chronicled in the national bestseller, "A Civil Action" which became a major motion picture starring John Travolta as Mr. Schlichtmann.

The Hiram H. Lesar Distinguished Lecture Series was established by the School of Law in 1992 to honor founding Dean Hiram H. Lesar, whose many personal and professional concerns included an interest in civil rights.
